PRESENTS

June 17&18, 2013

Economic Diplomacy &
Internationalisation

Economic diplomacy is the essential part of modern diplomacy. Together with the business people, diplomats aspire to seek new business and investment opportunities in foreign markets, protect the interests of their domestic economies abroad and attract inward foreign direct investments.

The economic crisis which has been going on since 2008 puts on the additional need of domestic economies to diversify and go international, in particular to the fast growing economies, such as the BRICS (Brasil, Russia, India, China and South Africa) countries. The new models of economic diplomacy have therefore been implemented, with the enhanced role of the Ministries of Foreign Affairs (MFA) and active cooperation between MFA, Ministries of Economy, Chambers of Commerce and Industry and other business associations and government institutions and agencies.

Internationalisation as the second part of economic diplomacy is very important to all companies, but in particular to the small and medium sized (SMEs) which in general do not have their own networks abroad.

ICPE has been aware of the importance of economic diplomacy and internationalisation and organised its first international two-day seminar on the new commercial diplomacy in November 2009 where ministries and other governmental institutions and agencies, international experts, business people and others from 18 countries shared their knowledge and experience.

As the conditions of the global economy, with the on-going impact of the economic crisis, have significantly changed since then, the need and interest for the second international conference has certainly aroused again.

The second conference will be organised with the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Slovenia as co-organiser and in partnership with Slovenian Chamber of Commerce and Industry, divided into two parts: the first day would be dedicated to the economic diplomacy & some successful models and the second day to internationalisation and practical experiences.

The second conference would therefore be an upgrade of the first one, as well as more concrete.
